Proof Points

Iconex produces true remanufactured cartridges. The re-manufacturing process starts with a virgin empty that is first disassembled and cleaned. Critical components are then replaced including installing a new long life photoconductor drum. Lastly, the cartridge is filled with toner to OEM specifications. Once the cartridge is re-assembled, it is tested utilizing an industry standard test print process which includes text, graphics and gray scale prints. Test pages are inspected for print defects prior to packaging. If the cartridge does not meet the Iconex and industry specifications, the cartridge is not sold and will never reach your business facility. This stringent process ensures the stated page yields and print quality equivalent to OEM performance and specifications is achieved.
